The 12" is small enough to fit in my coat pocket. The Sony VGA (Video Graphics Array) mouse was the same size as the Toshiba and did the job well. The webcam worked fine and the keyboard was good quality and very similar to the Toshiba. The only problem I had was the battery life. It only lasted about four hours (when working on the laptop), so for an 11 hour working day it was useless. Overall I was very impressed by this laptop and would recommend it to anyone looking for a cheap, compact, quality laptop. Purchased for my fiance who works full time and is always on the go. He found this compact portable suitable for a wide variety of uses - including playing a little poker. My only concern was the colour of the lid - it was a bit too light for him but I was able to get it at a reasonable price. The quality of the machine is superb. Only disappointment was a lack of decent ports - but a USB extension cable came in the box. Posted by Wigh on 3rd Jan 2009. Enterprise grade It looks to be a well made, well spec'd laptop that will be the first to go into our business. Posted by Alan on 2nd Jan 2009. A New Computer This is the first computer I have bought in a long while. I had used a Toshiba (not compatible with Vista) for a number of years, so wanted a different laptop. The only issue was the OS compatibility. I run Vista and Linux on my desktop, but only Windows XP on my laptop (I don't want to have to fight Vista).

When I first connected this laptop to my LAN, I was really impressed with the speed - this is no sluggish Toshiba. My only issue was that as a Linux user, I can't install the latest kernel on the system - so will have to continue with the 2.6.24 one. I am quite happy with the build quality. It's a bit heavy, but so is my old Toshiba! This is the first computer I have bought 82157476af
